

Mini Dungeon: Mansion of Mysteriosity

The players enter through the Foyer. The rooms will be laid out differently each time the party visits, with the GM arranging them as they please, and placing various elemental doors locked with corresponding keys. You can also make your own rooms to make the mansion bigger and add more puzzle elements.

About the Mansion

The mansion is owned by an elderly Mr Mime. The party has been tasked with getting to the Master Study of the house, where he tinkers with puzzles and comes up with mysterious new ideas. Here are some potential reasons the party could have come to the mansion:

- ✿ Mr Mime invited them to test his puzzles. He'll grade their performance and give gifts according to how well they did.
- ✿ His granddaughter, a Mime Jr, has asked you to deliver a basket of cookies to him. She finds the puzzles too puzzling, and they 'make her head dizzy'.
- ✿ Rumours tell of a grand treasure that Mr Mime has been hiding. The party has been hired to find it.
- ✿ Townsfolk are worried that Mr Mime is up to no good. The party has been asked to navigate his mansion to question him about his intentions.
- ✿ A young pokémon kicked a ball over his fence, and he took it to his study (he's actually fixing it). The party is promised a reward for returning it.

Mr Meriwether Mime

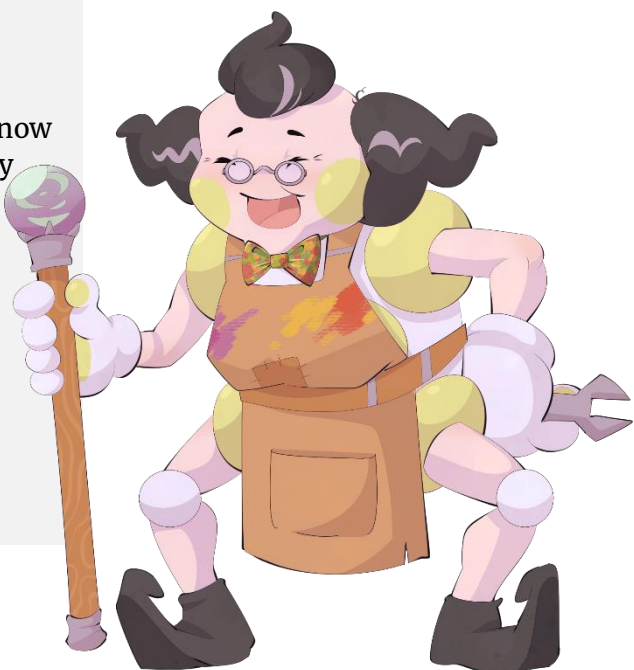

He/Him, Tinkerer, puzzle master

*"What a clever bunch you are!
You must be very proud!"*

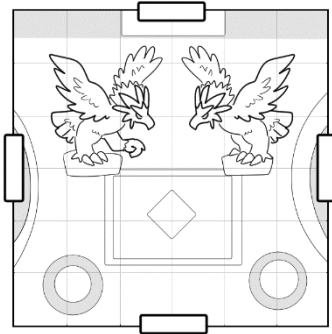

The friendly old owner of the Mansion of Mysteriosity. Formerly an adventurer, he now wants to help other pokémon stay sharp by solving his puzzles.

He applauds creativity and team work, and loves to see adventurers thinking outside the box. Intelligent, inquisitive, generous and more than a little kooky.

In battle he is purely defensive, setting screens and barriers so he can activate orbs to teleport threats away.

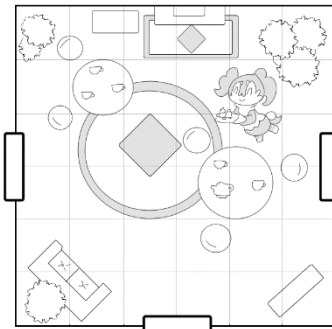

Ground Floor Rooms

FOYER

An open area with four doors. Large magical lamps light the space. The southern door leads to the Entry Way. The northern door is locked, made of a heavy polished wood. To open it, a player must hold down the claw of the left braviary statue.

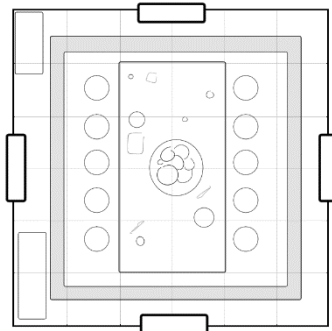

Upon entering, the statues come to life and engage combat. The braviary have the Statue enemy tag.

TEA ROOM

A friendly female indeedee bustles around laying the tables. The room is cozy, decorated with bookshelves and comfy chairs, and a lilac fire roars in the fireplace.

The party can find the Fire Key by investigating the fireplace. They can also find the Poisoner's Cup – a teacup that, when the phrase 'cheers' is spoken, releases a small dose of poison into the drink.

DINING ROOM

A large dining room with a long oak table. A bowl of mixed fruits and berries sits in the middle.

Upon entering, the ghosts in the room will begin to mess with players by throwing plates, pulling fur and snatching items. When noticed, they will enter combat. There are two litwick, two shuppet and one gastly.

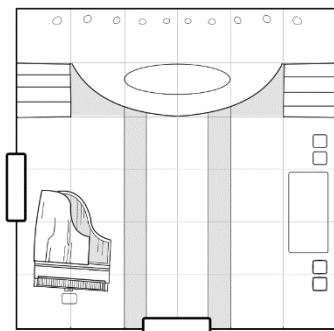

KITCHEN

A kitchen stocked with equipment for cooking a feast. The counters are dusted with flour and a cookbook sits open nearby. By following a recipe¹, players can make the Fairy Key cake.

Some ingredients are tricky to find, and will require rolls to gather. A spinarak living in the cupboard will offer to help, but keeps bringing jarred cheri berries instead of what he's been told to fetch.

¹ Use a recipe like this for the cake key. Using fruit and flowers necessitates garden visits.

BALLROOM

A note on the table to the right reads 'when you defeat the beast, play dead, and the waterworks will begin'. A haxorus on stage will battle the party, but will go easy on them and prefers a dramatic, theatrical fight over winning.

If the party plays the notes D-E-A-D on the piano, the fountain in the garden will be activated.

LIBRARY

A large open library. Use this room to supply hints for other puzzles – for example, what might make Jumpluff smile, how to meet Furfrou's style expectations, or how to get the key from the tandemaus in the basement.

The Guild Master can also include books on campaign lore here, to set up for future adventures.

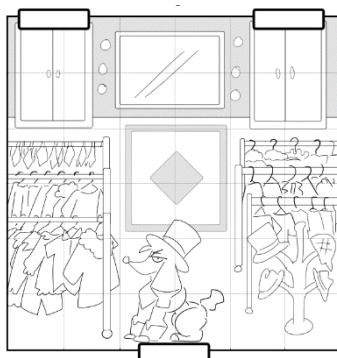

Upstairs Rooms

BATHROOM

A spacious bathroom with a large tub, stocked with various toiletries. Bathing and smelling nice will help the party convince Furfrou to let them into the Dressing Room.

You can also find a bottle of Eau de Cute Charm. When wearing this perfume, pokémon who pass within one space of you have a 10% chance of becoming infatuated.

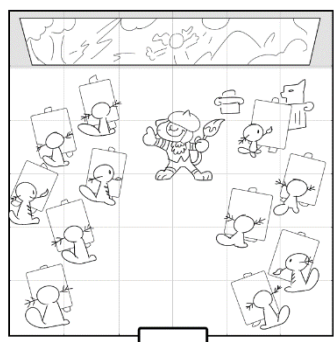

DRESSING ROOM

An enormous walk-in closet. Racks of clothes and accessories line the walls. Furfrou will not allow the party in unless they meet his standards.

Doors are located behind the closet doors. They may lead to anywhere in the manor.

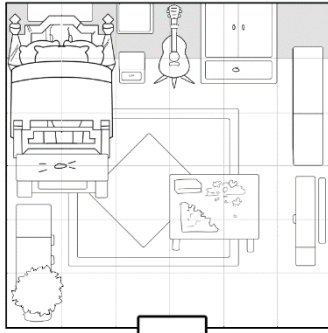

The flashier clothing items here can be used to fulfil the 'something gaudy' requirement of the Master Study door.

PAINTING ROOM

A smeargle leads a group of wooper in painting. To use the painting materials to make the Normal Key, the party must defeat smeargle in battle. The Guild Master may pick a moveset appropriate for the painter.

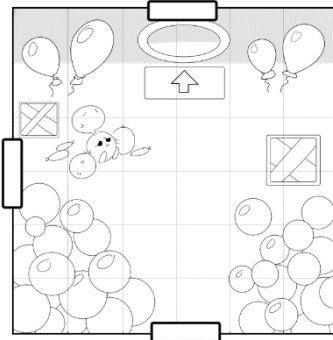

At the end of each round, the party takes 1 damage per 2 wooper remaining, and Smeargle regains that amount in health.

BEDROOM

Mr Mime's bedroom. A very cozy room, with paintings of his achievements hanging on the walls, and a case of old adventuring trophies.

If the jigsaw puzzle on the table is completed, the party gets the Psychic Key. A less morally-upstanding party can loot up to 3000 poké in cash from this room, and up to 5000 poké in valuables.

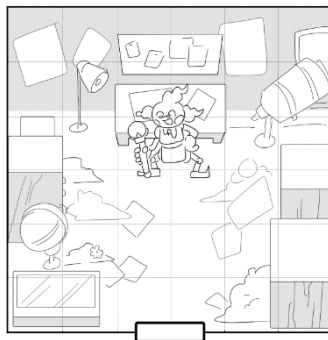

BALLOON ROOM

Jumpluff blows up balloons in this room, and is an expert in making balloon accessories, clothing, furniture, and most importantly, the Flying Key.

However, she's too sad to make anything but snake pokémon. If the party can cheer her up, she'll gladly make them whatever they want.

The slide leads to a random basement room.

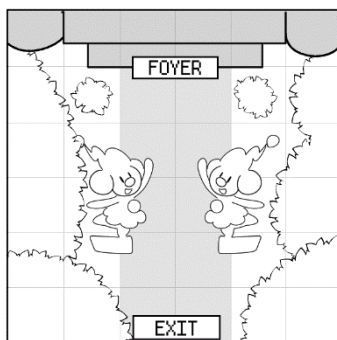

MASTER STUDY

A second barrier over the door reads 'Something nice, something mean, something gaudy and something green'. To enter the study, the party must present an item given by a friendly pokémon, an item looted from a hostile pokémon, a gaudy item from the Dressing Room and something from the Greenhouse.

Mr Mime will reward the party, but will not fight, attempting to teleport the party away if attacked.

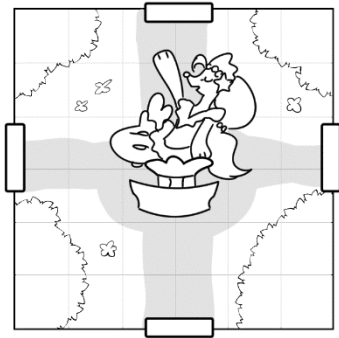

Outdoor Areas

ENTRY WAY

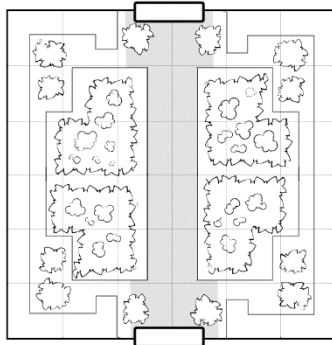

A path up to the mansion, where the players start. Flanked by green hedges, with two Mime Jr statues waving the way up to the front door.

Music and magic can be heard from inside. The Guild Master should use this space as an opportunity to set the tone of the adventure: whimsy, fun and intrigue.

FOUNTAIN

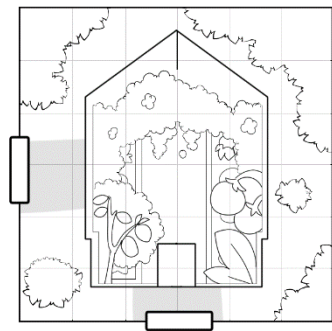

A large marble primarina can be found here, designed to pour water from the flower she's resting on. However, the water is shut off, causing the plants in the garden and greenhouse to dry up. A spinarak, a dewpider, a joltik and two bramblin will fight the party as they pass through. Examining the fountain, the party can find two cleanse orbs and a blue bow.

FLOWER GARDEN

Upon a first visit, this area is fairly dry and unimpressive. However, once the fountain is restored, it's full of beautiful blooms. The party can find the Grass Key, and various flowers and petals, including a single gracidea, Mr Mime's prize bloom. They can choose to take it.

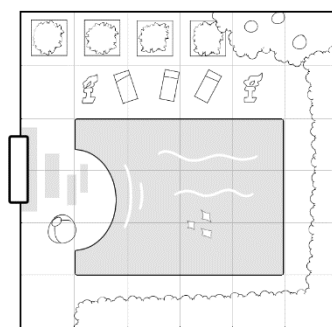

A bulbasaur, two steenee and two kriketune will fight the party here.

GREENHOUSE

Unimpressive on a first visit, but gorgeously verdant once the party turns on the water. It's full of fruits and vegetables, and a sign says 'take what you need'. The party is free to fill up on greens.

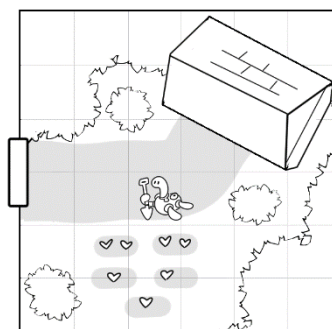

Although the players are free to take anything from tomatoes and lemons to peas and potatoes, trying to take any peppers will start a fight with two capsakid and two scovillain.

POOL

A fairly simple pool area. Deck chairs and pool toys are scattered about. The Water Key is attached to a rubber ducklet in the pool, and something sparkles in the deep. Entering the pool causes an inflatable sharpedo to become agitated. It is immune to electric-type attacks but weak to piercing or slashing.

The sparkle is the clasp of a Bag of Infinite Flour. It has unlimited carry space, and unlimited... flour.

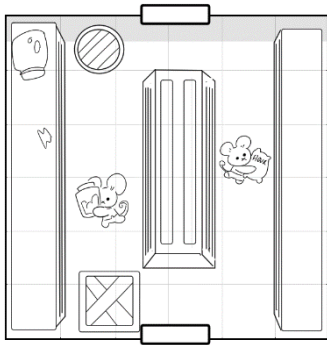

SHED

A shuckle tends to the gardens, and is taking a break. Inside the shed are various gardening tools, like shears, shovels and wheelbarrows.

Shuckle will turn oran berries into nutritious berry juice, but only if he likes the party. He's a bit of a grouch, but will respect anyone who can beat a few of the house's challenges

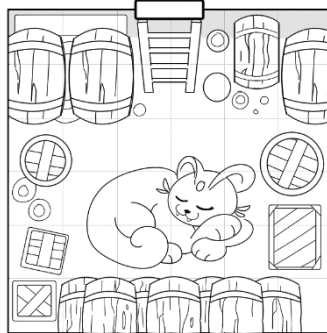

Basement Rooms

PANTRY

Two tandemaus bustle around, sorting the stock and shouting instructions at each other. The Ground Key is somewhere here, but hard to find. If the party drops something, the mice will sort it to its correct place, so if they drop a key, the mice will lead them to a can containing the key.

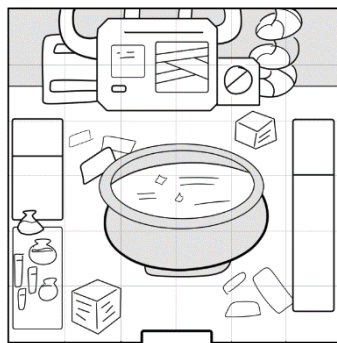

The room is full of dry, canned and jarred goods.

WINE CELLAR

The room smells incredibly strongly of alcohol and the walls are lined with pickling jars and casks of drink. An alolan persian lies in the middle.

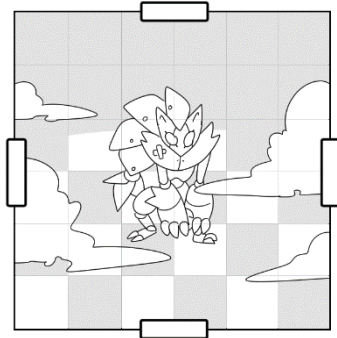

He's meant to tell a random riddle for the treasure, but is too sleepy to make it through, and will give up after a few attempts. The treasure is the Amulet of Screams, which increases your defense and special defense by 2, but when worn screams continuously, making stealth impossible.

ALCHEMY ROOM

Full of chemistry tools, a huge swirling pot, and the Orb Machine. The Orb Machine will produce a random orb when activated, but each orb has a 25% chance of breaking when dispensed. The cauldron is full of Mr Mime's special soup recipe, and one sip fills the stomach of an adventurer fully.

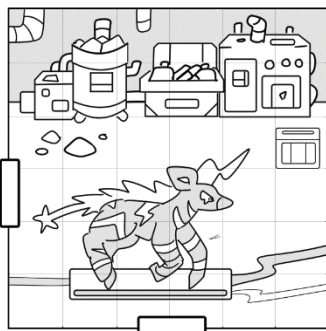

Two sinistea and a kadabra will fight the players upon entry to this room.

THE CHIMEROARK

In the middle of an empty, a mechanical zoroark sits. It will shapeshift into each party member in turn, with their stats and traits, and is only defeated once it has no more party members to copy.

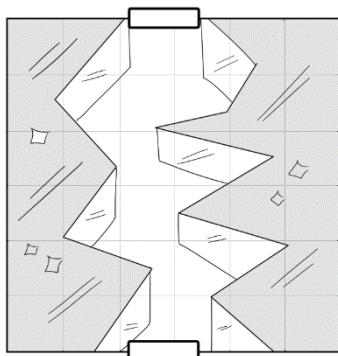

It will skip a party member if they give it an emotionally important item. The player must be ready to explain why the item is significant.

GENERATOR ROOM

As well as the heating and main generators, this room contains a zebstrika running on a treadmill to power the Electric Door. He is running because he likes it, and can either be convinced or fought to stop him from running.

Shutting off the power from the main generator will make the house dark, but not disengage the magic doors.

MIRROR HALL

A corridor lined with mirrors. Looking into them will show alternate versions of the party – if they'd made different choices, been in different circumstances, or just been different.

Two bronzor, a dusclops and a sableye will emerge from the mirrors to fight the party.

The Steel Key appears in a mirror. If a party member picks it up using their reflection, they can retrieve it.

The house has several magic doors. When placing rooms, mark locations for which doors are locked by magic, but be careful not to soft-lock any rooms by making it impossible to get a key without already having the same key.

The keys are:

- ✿ The Fire Key, which goes to the ashen Fire Door
- ✿ The Fairy Key, which goes to the cake-themed Fairy Door
- ✿ The Normal Key, which goes to the painted Normal Door
- ✿ The Psychic Key, which goes to the jigsaw-themed Psychic Door
- ✿ The Flying Key, which goes to the balloon-covered Flying Door
- ✿ The Grass Key, which goes to the floral Grass Door
- ✿ The Ground Key, which goes to the dusty Ground Door
- ✿ The Steel Key, which goes to the reflective Steel Door

The Guild Master may create more doors and keys, with more puzzles or encounters to find them. For example, an Ice Key could be found in a deep freezer, accessed by melting blocks of ice to form stairs, a Poison Key could be placed in the Alchemy Room, or a Dragon Key gifted as reward for beating the haxorus in the ballroom with extra flair.

Keep in mind that adding more keys without adding more rooms increases the risk of creating a soft-lock: for example, if the party can't access the Fairy Key without the Fire Key, but also can't access the Fire Key without the Fairy Key. Adding more rooms, or adding simple corridors and passage spaces, helps alleviate this risk.

Doors other than the magic doors can also be locked or trapped, requiring skill to disarm or open. Traps can range from sleeping gas or poison darts to enemy ambushes.

Enemies should spawn in the rooms as listed, but more may be added thematically to add challenge. Additional puzzles can also be added – here are a few examples.

- ✳ A door is sealed with a bronze pyroar door knocker. However, it's missing a ring to knock with. Replacing the ring with any other hoop or fitting object and knocking will open the door.
- ✳ A door or chest has several keyholes. The players must solve a logic puzzle or riddle to figure out which to open and which to leave closed.
- ✳ A corridor is covered in tiles depicting various pokémon. To pass, the party must step on a tile depicting a pokémon of a type advantageous against the one they're currently standing on.
- ✳ In an armoury, a statue of a doublade stands above a plaque reading 'RAISE THE RIGHT SWORD AND PASS'. The room is full of swords. However, the rightmost doublade sword is loose, and can be raised to solve the puzzle.
- ✳ A passageway or staircase is lit by many torches. A plaque reads 'The road of life is dark, but light does naught but blind'. The passage is endless when it's lit, and the party can walk along it in either direction for hours. However, if it's made totally dark, the end will appear after only a few steps.
- ✳ Upon entering a room, party members are afflicted with a random curse (they take damage if they say 'and', they become a little bit magnetic, anyone they touch becomes confused, they turn very slightly translucent, an annoying little voice echoes everything they say, etc). They can only leave if they correctly identify what their curse is.
- ✳ A 'Compliment-Powered Machine' that must be charged up by having each party member say something nice about each other.
- ✳ A puzzle that requires the party to identify a pokémon via a very vague or misleading pokédex entry or poor description.

This dungeon is highly customisable, so add challenges that suit your players' strengths.

Each room can also be searched for treasure. Besides the obvious – food items in the kitchen and pantry, seeds in the shed, orbs in the alchemy room and scarves in the dressing room – you can add more goodies for your party to find.

At the end of the adventure, the party will meet Mr Mime.

If the party is here on friendly terms, he will heal them fully and reward them with three reviver seeds, one joy seed each, 300 poké each, and the Mime Mask. When worn, the mask raises your Def and Sp. Def by 3, grants you a 10% bonus to Performance rolls, and allows you to juggle up to six items flawlessly. However, you are given a clown-like appearance. Silly voice optional. They may also call upon him for aid in the future.

If the party is here on hostile terms, such as wanting to fight or rob him, he will react defensively while asking the intruders to leave. If they persist, he will attempt to warp them away using orbs; failing this, he will offer poké for them to leave without hurting him. However, he will covertly send a telepathic message to his granddaughter to alert local rescue teams and law enforcement of the situation.
